This play explores the chilling psychology behind the infamous crime and subsequent trial of Nathaniel Leopold & Richard Loeb. Set against the backdrop of the trial that shocked the world, the play uncovers themes of obsession, guilt, and the nature of evil. Logan's sharp dialogue and vivid storytelling create a powerful, thought-provoking experience for audiences, while local legend and Groove Theatre founder, E.T. Wilford's direction promises to bring a fresh, daring perspective to this iconic piece of theatre.

How Your Support Makes a Difference

As a donor, you are directly contributing to the realization of this production. Your support helps cover critical costs including:

- Set Design & Construction: Crafting an immersive environment that captures the essence of the 1920s Chicago setting.
- Costumes & Makeup: Designing period-accurate costumes and makeup to bring the characters to life.
- Lighting & Sound: Creating a mood and atmosphere that enhances the emotional intensity of the play.
- Marketing & Outreach: Reaching new audiences and ensuring that as many people as possible experience this important work.

"The media frenzy surrounding crimes like those committed by Leopold and Loeb in the 1920s mirrors the sensationalism we see today in cases like the revived Menendez brothers trial or the public obsession with alleged assassin Luigi Magione. Despite the differences in time and context, the core of these stories remains the same: the complex intersection of crime, motive, and justice." - E.T. Wilford
